EASTERN NEWS.

[BY TELEGRAPH TO THE OREGONIAN.]

Arrival of the Emperor of Brazil.

New York, April 15.—The steamship [illegible] with the Emperor and Empress of Brazil [arrived in] the lower bay about noon. The batteries [illegible] fired 100 guns in honor of the royal party, and the Brazilian frigate Orecho honored the Emperor by a salute, as did also the U. S. frigate [illegible]. Admiral [illegible], Robeson and Taft, Vice Admiral [illegible], Gen. Sherman, the Brazilian minister and the Brazilian Centennial commissioners in a [illegible] steamer met the Emperor's steamer on the bay. The custom house and city [illegible] government cutter down the bay [illegible] the hospitality of the [illegible] tendered [illegible] Mayor Wickham. The Mayor [illegible] greeted the Emperor with the Brazilian [illegible], and Secretary Fish made a [illegible] address of welcome. The [illegible] was gaily [illegible] with flags and the Brazilian imperial [illegible] run to the maintop. The flags on all public buildings and hotels are flying in honor of the Emperor's arrival.

Dodged the Crowd.

New York, April 15.—The Emperor and Empress landed at pier No. 2, East river, took a carriage and drove to the hotel, thus avoiding the immense crowd awaiting their arrival at the Twenty fourth street landing, where the members of the Cabinet [awaited] the steamer.

The Emperor and Empress at Church.

[illegible]—His Majesty Dom Pedro, of Brazil, accompanied by the Empress and suite, attended divine service at St. Patrick's Cathedral at half past 10 o'clock this morning. The Emperor and Empress were [placed] in the sanctuary within the railings. [illegible] High Mass was celebrated and Vicar General Quinn, on behalf of Cardinal McCloskey [illegible] welcomed their Majesty's to this country, and congratulated them on their prosperous [voyage]. He prayed that the remainder of their journey might be equally auspicious and happy. A large crowd assembled both outside and inside the church to catch a glimpse of the imperial [party]. After church they were driven through Central Park.

Stewart's Legatees.

New York, April 15.—The parties to whom Stewart left fourteen legacies of $20,000 or less, other than his wife's relations, are chiefly attorneys, accountants or other business employes, or servants. The press generally voices the public surprise at the character of the will. The Tribune says Stewart [illegible] baffled inquiries during his life time [and] has baffled them after his death. He has done none of the score of different things expected of him. He has never given his money in charity or devoted it to any other public purpose, nor left it entirely to his family. He has simply not disposed [of it] at all. It was his boast that his mercantile [business was] regulated by the most exact [system], and not a man in his establishment was allowed to exercise his own discretion, but he left [his] estate, at least, to be disposed of according to the [best] understanding of what his wishes would be, and left the task to perform himself. Nothing in Stewart's case is half so strange as this will. It completes his whole life. There is nothing in the will to show whether his unexplained designs of beneficence were on a large scale or a small one, whether they called for thousands or for millions. The Times says the prevailing sentiment in regard to the provisions of the will is one of disappointment. This perhaps is unusual, but perfectly natural. It is not more than once in a century that a man can expect to accumulate within a single life, so vast a fortune as that which Stewart possessed. What boundless opportunities for well doing presented themselves to the disposer of even a small portion of such a sum, and that not within the limited area of public charities so much as in the field of social [illegible] elevation of the literary or art [illegible] culture and of scientific endowment. Our [illegible] plans for elevating the fallen receive far more attention than methods of education and public morality instilling refined tastes and cultivating respect whereby people above the level of social outcasts may be kept from sinking toward it. The public will persist in thinking of the noble contribution Stewart might have made to any or all of these ends, just as they will in regretting that he has left his intentions in so very nebulous a condition. The Woman's Home and the Homestead ex[periment] are so far the only enterprises begun by Stewart which should be ranked as plans for the welfare of our fellow beings. So far as his direct instructions go, nineteen-twentieths of his enormous fortune passes to the widow, without any conditions [illegible] to its future disposal. A man may do as he will with his own, but there will still exist [illegible] whether one who owed so much [illegible] and social development of this country did [illegible] giving up for the sake of others so little of his substance in return. There are perfectly [illegible] persons who live and die without the [illegible] conception of the meaning of public spirit. Stewart's mind had evidently become so much subdued to what it worked in to be able to respond to the demand of this kind of local [illegible] in a way at all equal to his opportunities. [illegible] Stewart has honored womanhood by the trust he has displayed in the discretion of his widow. He has bestowed one of the most [illegible] ever granted to faithful and sincere [illegible] service in his bequest to Judge Hilton [illegible] with princely liberality the [illegible] interests of the men who helped to [build] the [illegible] mechanism of his business, [and] two of the friends of his early [days] have shared his money in a generous manner. But many will compare the work of a moderate fortune like that of Peter Cooper with that of men like Stewart, and suggest that the great dry goods [merchant] should have given the city to which he owed so much no better reasons for holding him in lasting honor. Judge Hilton says Stewart [illegible] preferring to assist people [to help] themselves by their own industry. [illegible] the widow's actions will indicate her husband's ideas as to the best method of aiding [worthy] enterprises.

The Express objects to the criticisms of Stewart's will and eulogizes him with discriminating warmth. If others were hurt by him it was because he was abler and bolder than others. He was more than a [illegible], he was a great merchant, a first [class] man, and so fitted for a place in the cabinet to which Grant invited him. He had great [tact], executive ability and foresight. If he ever made a mistake in business, he had the courage to correct it at any present cost. His judgment was good. He had a courage equal to the occasion whatever it was, and there was his success.

Mrs. Stewart's Assignment to Judge Hilton.

New York, April 16.—It appears that in addition to the power of attorney given to Judge Hilton to manage her estate, Mrs. Stewart yesterday filed in [illegible] office a transfer and assignment of all her husband's share in the business of A. T. Stewart & Co., as well as of all his property real and personal except the real estate included in the city of New York, to Judge Hilton, for the sum of $1,000. Both instruments are dated April 14, 1876.

Effect of the War Rumors on Trade in New York.

New York, April 15.—The European war rumors are claimed to be affecting speculation in cotton, [grain] and provisions. To this is ascribed the [rise] in cotton last Thursday in the face of [illegible] influences favorable to an advance. This [illegible] to be the cause of the recent large [business] in rye, which is rarely bought in large lots except for export. The World editorially says some [months] before the Franco German war broke out [illegible] and for grain sprung up in this market [illegible] to Germany, when there was nothing in the markets of that country to warrant the [demand] thereof. The export demand for cured [meats] is also to be noticed but it may have no reference to military supplies. Should hostilities of a [serious] nature occur in Europe the immediate effect upon the United States would be very marked. [illegible] the drift which prices and speculation have taken in the past few weeks.

A Conference to Secure Honest Candidates.

New York, April 15.—A call has been issued for a conference, to be held in this city on the 15th of May, to consider what may be done to secure the election of men in the national election to the highest offices of the republic whose character and ability will satisfy the exigencies of the present condition of affairs, protect the honor of the American name and prevent the national election of the centennial year from becoming a mere choice of [evils] and satisfy the peculiar desires [illegible]. Wool Market.

Boston, April 15.—The wool market [illegible] small but no material change [illegible]. It is doubtful, however, what figures [illegible] if wool were forced upon the market. Demand [illegible] is very limited and sales can only [be made at] low figures. Choice fine wools [illegible] are scarce. XXX Ohio could not be purchased [for] less than 44@45c, but there is more or less [illegible] wool on the market that will have to be sold at lower figures. Michigan and Wisconsin [illegible] not be quoted at over 38@40c at [illegible] prices. In fact desirable Michigan [illegible] been offered to arrive from neighboring [illegible] without finding buyers. Recent sales show shrinkages of 5 and 10 from figures realized for this description. Most of the leading mills have a supply on hand sufficient to meet their wants until the new crop comes forward and [illegible] considered almost nominal. Sales of California wool 200,000 pounds 18@25c for fall 18 and 30c for spring, latter for choice. The stock of [illegible] wool is light and most of it not very desirable [illegible] about the figure for choice spring wool is [illegible] but burry lots are difficult to force at low figures and

Of 500 men at work there during the November election Randall appointed a third. Democrats and Republicans being obliged to go to him. The most important witness to day was Naval Constructor Hartt. He was examined touching the supplies of live oak furnished to the Mare Island yard some time ago. He was closely questioned concerning the coal ring (at Mare Island) charges against him. He furnished short measure, placed false names on the pay rolls and was in league with the contractors. He denied everything, and said the watch presented him by McKay was returned to him.

WASHINGTON CITY.

Presidential Canvass.

Washington, April 15.—The Presidential canvass continues active. The greatest and most recent [feature] in the political world is the surprising weakness of Morton in the south where his strength was especially supposed to lie. Some of Morton's friends attribute this to the Administration working for Conkling, hence their antagonism to the latter. It is thought among active, earnest and thoughtful politicians, that Blaine is constantly and surely gaining in strength more than any other man who runs squarely with the Republicans as distinguished from the Administration machine. Whether he grows rapidly enough to secure a nomination remains to be proved, but his stock continues to rise now. Conkling too develops [illegible] strength, but nothing promising to overcome the widespread conviction among cool headed [men] that if nominated, nothing but the clearest Democratic folly could save the Republicans from defeat at the polls. Bristow continues to be talked of more and more among the people and Blaine and Bristow begin to be named as the ticket among the party workers. The efforts to damage Blaine by imputations of corruption have missed fire. [illegible] his simple but denial, especially [illegible] all the parties to the presented transaction in Arkansas bonds, including E. Morton & Co., the bankers, through whom it was said to be made, sustained the denial. Much feeling is excited by the conviction that these imputations originated in Morton's camp.

New York, April 15.—The Sun professes to think Blaine is not progressing as rapidly as lately, and urges that the Republicans cannot consistently refuse to support Conkling because the latter has been the sturdy unchanging advocate of Grantism. Curtis in Harper's Weekly epitomizes the motive of the anti Conkling movement when he says the fierce protestations of reform with candidates who are themselves constituent parts of the thing to be reformed will not carry the country. The Tribune, without advocating it alone, says the drift of Republican sentiment tends clearly to Blaine and Bristow. One of its correspondents says the practical view is this: a discussion of honest men upon the candidates who are not available at Cincinnati will promote the chances of objectionable candidate and make reform impossible. Blaine can be nominated by the party convention, Bristow cannot. Therefore the effort to push Bristow where Blaine's strength chiefly is found is a diversion in favor of the objectionable candidates. Blaine represents the better part of the Republican party. Bristow represents a theory, an identity. His candidacy can only distract to defeat friends of good government. The Evening Post gives notice substantially that it is for a third party nomination if the Republicans fail of a thorough reform ticket and argues to show that only in this way can political virtue get a hearing. It is for reform at all hazards, outside of the party if not in it.

The Charge against Blaine.

New York, April 15.—A Times Washington special says attempts are made to fasten on the friends of Bristow and Morton the recent charge against Blaine. This is probably incorrect. Democrats had the story a week ago, calculating to keep it in the hope that Blaine would be nominated at Cincinnati. The affair is yet a mystery. The Union Pacific certainly paid somebody $64,000 for Arkansas bonds. How Blaine's name became associated with the transaction is yet unknown. The publication upset the Democratic plans and Blaine ought to be thankful. The question of President is responsible for it all. If Blaine were not a prominent candidate the story would never have been printed.

Issue of Silver Coin.

The Secretary of the Treasury will undoubtedly take immediate steps to issue silver coins as the acts such action is left to his discretion. The treasurer now favors the issue through the treasury exclusively, and probably this plan will be adopted. Mr. Bristow, however, has not yet decided. The proposed substitution of silver for currency will require about the same [illegible] with paper, about a year.

Rumored Indictment against Babcock.

It is rumored that the grand jury found an indictment against Babcock yesterday in the safe burglary conspiracy. It is not yet verified. Columbus Alexander, the chief person interested, [illegible] to accomplish it. It is probable if the truth is ever discovered that Babcock may be found to have acquired after the burglary [such a] knowledge of affairs as might render him accessory after the fact. That he had any connection with the planning is not generally believed.

The Kilbourn Case.

The judiciary committee adopted the report of the subcommittee regarding Kilbourn, and the House will therefore probably refuse to send Kilbourn to court. This action would be unprecedented. There may be no trouble in this case, but where decision is unjust and cruel it might lead to serious consequences.

Babcock and other Safe Burglars Indicted.

Washington, April 15.—The grand jury indicted Babcock, Harrington, Whitely, Benton, Miles and Somerville, for complicity in the safe burglary conspiracy. Warrants are issued for the arrest of each except Babcock, who appeared and gave bail in the sum of $10,000. [illegible] Shepherd became his surety. Gen. Babcock expected his indictment and with his surety was awaiting in the office of [illegible] Cooke, who was one of his counsel in his St. Louis trial. A new indictment against Whittman also was found by the grand jury. It is understood that all except Babcock and Harrington will be used as witnesses, and against the indictments of those testifying will be entered a nolle prosequi. Rumors that Harrington cannot be found are [illegible] [illegible].

Purman's Investigation.

In the Purman investigating case to day, Chas. T. Dyke, publisher of a Democratic paper in Tallahassee, testified that the $500 which Simpkins recently testified about was to be used for the election of Witherspoon to the legislature and was to be given to Purman. Dr. Simpkins was recalled and after some hesitation admitted that Dyke's testimony was correct.

Washington, April 15.—Luttrell to day presented to the House a memorial signed by Gen. Sherman and several hundred others formerly citizens of California and now residents of the Atlantic States, urging Congress to give immediate and full attention to the long pending claim of John A. Sutter. After referring to his [illegible] and private generosity in the early days of California, the important part he played in opening up the boundless mineral wealth of the State at this present advanced age they express the opinion that it would be a lasting public shame [illegible]. Among the numerous signatures are those of [illegible], Eugene Kelly, J. C. Fremont, John K. Hackett, Francis D. Clark, J. W. Denver, Mark Brumagim, A. B. [illegible], Jesse Seligman, C. P. The silver will be issued only at the sub treasuries for fractional currency delivered at the department. It has not yet been determined whether the department will bear the expense of the transportation of the silver to the bankers and other parties applying therefor. There are $7,000,000 of silver and silver bullion now in the vaults of the Treasury and sub treasury that can be drawn and enough will be provided to be issued for the fractional currency in circulation as rapidly as the same may be presented.

Decision of the Illinois Railroad Cases Expected.

It is expected that the supreme court will tomorrow render its decision in what are known as the Illinois railroad cases which involve several highly important questions concerning the taxation of railway companies and the power of the lower courts to wholly enjoin enforced collections of taxes on their lands and other property for the alleged reasons that in some respects the taxes were illegally levied and that the assessments were too high. It has been argued upon appeal that no court should in such cases restrain the collection of the tax even temporarily unless the company tendered the amount which it admitted to be legally levied and the amount due upon a valuation which it admitted to be correct, or in other words that the corporation must pay what it admits to be due before it can possibly be exempt from paying the remainder of any tax assessed against it. It was further argued that if this view be not sustained a corporation possessing millions of dollars worth of property can wholly escape taxation if it be able to prove that the valuation placed upon it is any $50,000 too high or that some small portion of the total amount is not the entire taxable property of that State.

No new arrests in safe burglary case. Whitely's pardon depends upon his testifying, and upon his testimony depends the entire case of Babcock. Harrington's whereabouts is still unknown. The evidence of his guilt is said to be very positive. The case cannot possibly be tried before the middle of June. An effort will be made to morrow to fix a day for another trial of Ottman, who is charged with the embezzlement of $[illegible] from the Treasury.

British Legation at Cairo, Egypt.

New York, April 15.—The Tribune's London correspondent mentions the rumor of the intended establishment of a British legation at Cairo, and says it is not a stock jobbing story, and that a Downing street official when questioned about it turned pale. CONGRESSIONAL.

House.

Washington, April 15.—White of Kentucky sent to the clerk's desk and had read an article from the Concord (N. H.) Monitor printing a circular signed by C. H. Smith, Journal clerk of the House, offering to aid in the prosecution of additional bounty claims for a commission of 25 per cent. The article also speaks of Smith as being the confidential friend of Representative Jones of New Hampshire and describes the proposition as a nice little scheme to make a few perquisites by an ambitious young man who holds an office disqualifying him from openly acting as an attorney before the departments. He also offered a resolution instructing the judiciary committee to inquire into the matter. Smith handed an explanatory letter to the Speaker, which was read to the House, in which he states that being at home in New Hampshire at the recent election there, he saw in the telegraphic dispatches that an additional bounty bill was before the House and that he had made up his mind if the bill should pass to resign his official position and follow his profession as an attorney and in that view he had prepared and issued the circular referred to.

Morrison offered an amendment to White's resolution referring Smith's communication to the committee on rules, with instructions to ascertain whether Smith had violated any law or done any act inconsistent with his position as an employe of the House. After discussion, the question was referred to the committee on rules.

Knott, chairman of the judiciary committee, reported back the senate bill to provide for the administering of oaths in impeachment trials. Passed.

Singleton, from the committee on appropriations, reported back the Senate amendments to the consular and diplomatic appropriation bill, and moved that they be non-concurred in gross.

Garfield remonstrated against that course as being unusual at this stage of the session. The House should have an opportunity of voting on the amendments in detail.

Singleton did not insist on the motion and the amendment was ordered printed and recommitted.

Hurd, from the judiciary committee reported a resolution in the habeas corpus case of Kilbourn, directing the sergeant at arms to make a careful return to the writ, setting out the causes of the detention of Kilbourn, and retain custody of his body and not to produce it before the judge or court without further orders of the House. He proceeded to argument in support of the resolution. Hurd then stated he had just been informed by the sergeant at arms that he had appeared before the judge at 10 o'clock this forenoon and that the hearing of the case being postponed until next Tuesday he therefore gave notice he would call the previous question on Monday at 1 o'clock. Adjourned.

IN RE PENDLETON ET AL

McMinnville, April [illegible], 1876.

To the Editor of the Oregonian:

It was not for the want of sufficient evidence that George H. Pendleton was not found guilty as "Independent" in a recent issue of the Oregonian affirmed. The case was in the hands of his political friends, who did not wish to sustain the charges.

Mr. Bowler, the husband of Pendleton's sister, owned three-fifths of the Kentucky Central Railroad. This stock at the time of Mr. Bowler's death was valued at five cents on the dollar. This road rendered the government services during the war, for which Secretary Stanton paid. The company claimed $148,385 more. This bill was rejected by Secretaries Stanton, Schofield and Rawlins, and all others to whom it was presented.

In 1870, Pendleton, as executor of the Bowler estate became president of the railroad company at a salary of $6,000. Holding the double office of executor and president of the company, it was his duty to attend the business without a contingent fee of 50 per cent. The clerk, Ransom, did the work, and if this account was legitimate, why did Pendleton require the extra $80,000 or $90,000 (he cannot remember which) for the use of his name and influence. Ransom, who was in the employ of the company received from Pendleton before he would take part in the affair $15,000 as a pay. Mr. Pendleton's service consisted in inducing Belknap to submit the case to the Quartermaster General, which, after argument was referred to an assistant judge advocate general. Payment was finally recommended and of course, hastily approved by Secretary Belknap and the money paid out of the Treasury.

The above is from the statement of "Gentleman George." He received either $80,000 or $90,000 and his clerk $15,000 for services which as employes of the company they had already received their salaries. It is not the custom to pay 50 per cent. for collecting nor do lobbyists expect so much on just accounts. Mr. "Independent" could not plead for his friend when that friend has already confessed his guilt. He says he paid Belknap nothing for his favors. He would hardly be expected to tell it in plain words. He confesses enough to prove that he is not right. [illegible] he paid a part of his $[illegible] to Mrs. Bowers before she was married to the Secretary of War. Other evidence has been produced corresponding with the statement of Gen. Kidder. Three treasury warrants were drawn, one of which, amounting to $[illegible], was endorsed by Pendleton and made payable to the First National Bank of New York. This money, it is [illegible], through the hands of two persons was paid to Mrs. Bowers [illegible] Mrs. Belknap.

If "Independent" excuses Pendleton for what we have reason to believe he was guilty of I suppose he thinks it was perfectly honorable for Hendricks to take $1,000 from the [illegible] in the U. S. Senate. Was it honorable for Thurman to accept $50,000 for his aid in the interest of the Atlantic and Great Western railroad? How do you excuse Allen for his crookedness with the McArthur heirs? If you can excuse none of these offences where will the Democrats find a candidate for President?

Chinese Nuisance Investigation.

The Senate Chinese commission to day heard the testimony of Detective Officer Rogers relative to the questions under consideration. His evidence was to the effect that the existing laws and regulations if properly enforced were sufficient to suppress the houses devoted to gambling and prostitution; that all Chinamen were natural thieves; that they habitually violated all laws and ordinances, made their own regulations for their internal government, and when it seemed for their interest, invoked the aid of the legal tribunals to assist them in carrying out their designs. The heads of the Chinese companies were present for examination, but at noon the commission adjourned until Monday, when their testimony will be taken.

Racers Going East.

The exodus of racing stock will occur to morrow morning. Budd Doble will start East in his special car with Goldsmith Maid, Abe Edgington, Sam Purdy, Ella Wright and Clementina. Joe Daniels will go on the same train taking Springbok and Rutherford, all en route to New York.

Testimony of Detective Rogers.

The testimony of detective Rogers before the Senate Chinese committee to day, that if the officers did their duty the Chinese gambling houses and bagnios could be promptly suppressed, tended to create the impression amongst the committeemen that due diligence had not been shown by the city authorities for the suppression of the evil. Rogers stated that with three or four efficient officers he could close them all up for the time being in a single night; that news of descent on any one establishment was by some mysterious telegraphy known all over Chinatown in a few moments, when the others would be immediately shut down. His evidence tended to show that the system of specials paid by residents on their beat did not work well in Chinatown, although some of the specials were excellent efficient officers. The fault lay in the system.

The Silver Question in San Francisco.

San Francisco, April 16.—Some doubts have been expressed in regard to the assertion that silver coin will float from the East to this State as soon as the redemption of fractional currency commenced. A merchant in this city already has orders in New York for a large amount of silver to be shipped here as soon as it can be obtained for fractional currency or greenbacks. One of the banks in this city has $20,000 in silver coin now en route from New York and it is believed in well informed circles that such shipment will continue until silver again touches a discount, when such transactions will be no longer profitable.

Arrival of More Chinese.

San Francisco, April 16.—The British steamer Cocus arrived to day from Hongkong via Yokohama with rice and 882 Chinamen. She reports two other British steamers there, up for this port. The Cocus sailed before the telegrams of the heads of the Chinese companies here had been received in Hongkong counseling the cessation of emigration. She intended to sail direct here from Hongkong, but when two days out the Chinese mutinied, complaining of the food and water. The mutiny was quelled without loss of life, but in consequence of it, the ship put in at Yokohama and took forty extra crew. It had been given out here that on her arrival the anti coolie secret society would mob the passengers and a strong police force was placed at the landing and on the way to Chinatown, but no disturbance occurred.

Rifle Contest at Bay View.

San Francisco, April 16.—The contest to day at Bay View rifle range between Captain H. T. Burns and Wm. A Shooting Scrape.

A shooting scrape occurred to day at ten o'clock A. M. at Five Oak Station, 12 miles from this city. Willard Cross shot and fatally wounded Frank Steel, with a revolver, shooting him twice—once in the left nipple under the right arm and the other in the temple, both of which are fatal. Steel commenced the quarrel by using abusive language to Cross, and striking him several times on the head and face when Cross fired at him. Cross is under arrest. Steele was alive at last accounts, but was not expected to live long.

NEVADA.

Attempted Stage Robbery.

Pioche, April 15.—This morning the Record contains the following account of an attempted stage robbery last night: The Hamilton and Eureka stage was stopped by a road agent last evening about three miles from Pioche, and Pat Ryan, the driver, was ordered to throw down the box. As the stage was stopped, Eugene Blair, the messenger, dropped down in the front boot with his double barreled shotgun. Pat Ryan threw an empty box to the road agent, who, as he grabbed it, called out, "Ryan, is that the right one?" Ryan made some reply which he don't recollect, as just at that time Blair fired at the robber, who, without doubt, received the shot in the side as it turned him partially round. He returned the fire at once, just as Ryan commenced whipping up the horses. After they had gone a short distance, they were halted and Blair getting down went back after the box which he found, but the robber had managed to get away. There is no doubt, however, but what he will be caught this time as the gun shot wound will betray him. Blair says it was an Irishman, he recognized the brogue.

The Daily Oregonian.

MONDAY MORNING, APRIL [illegible] 187[illegible]

THE NEW [illegible]

[illegible] railways [illegible] their [illegible] the stitching [illegible] toward the railway companies. Their true [illegible] Holladay [illegible] control of the [illegible] has [illegible] in Oregon he assumed the leadership of [illegible] parts and the construction [illegible] for the accomplishment of [illegible] purposes. And [illegible] placed himself at [illegible] surrounded by a [illegible] persons who [illegible] politics their daily [illegible] soon became the [illegible] centre of an organization reaching all through the State, mostly [illegible] whose [illegible] stocks [illegible] destroyed him. The railways were used to build up these political friends and to oppress their enemies by frequent discriminations. A town laid out in the interest of a member of his political ring must be built up at every hazard by the aid of the road, and to accomplish that other towns on the line of the road in which the people of the respective localities had been collected with their institutions and conveniences from a time long prior to any talk of railways would be denied the simplest accommodation. A passenger to get on board the train must travel along the line of the road two or three miles to the new town of the political favorite. A ton of freight must be hauled in the same way. By just such unjust means [illegible] as this, the people of large and [illegible] productive sections of the country were made enemies of the manager of the roads. An equally unjust and much more offensive discrimination was exercised among individual shippers. Notably this was so on the east side road. A member of Holladay's political ring could get private terms by which he would have an advantage of several cents on every bushel of grain over outsiders. This enabled him to defy competition and rule the market at prices which others could not afford and thus eventually to get a monopoly of the business for his particular locality. Competition being thus put down the price also was put down and thus a double wrong was wrought, a wrong to the shipper driven out of the market and a wrong to the farmer. The merchant sells his goods to any who will pay his price, but Mr Holladay labored under the mistake that the same rule of business was essential to the management of railways, and charged different prices for the same service, according as the person for whom it was performed was related to his ring in political matters. Complaints of this sort of discrimination were common.

But these were not the worst things to which the connection between the railways and politics gave rise. There were [illegible] employed on and about the roads a large number of persons. These were a solid phalanx to be [illegible] on the [illegible] of elections and primaries as was deemed best calculated to accomplish the end in view. Working men whose families depended on their daily earnings for bread could choose between voting as directed and the loss of their [illegible] poor man. [illegible] however need not be told what [illegible] made. [illegible] the roads were used for the free transportation of [illegible] and shoulder hitters and vagrants from one town into another whenever [illegible] necessary to overrule by such forces the manifest wishes of the citizens. A primary meeting, a political convention, a local or general election was the occasion for the free transportation of all the henchmen and swashbucklers of the ring. In short, by every method that could be devised by Mr Holladay, or suggested to him, the railways were made to minister to politics and politicians, to their own great injury and the ultimate [illegible] of their owner.

[illegible] lesson in all this for the new management to ponder. They come forward enjoying the good wishes of [illegible] [illegible] Holladay [illegible] ... a railway that is managed as [illegible] Mr Holladay [illegible] ... the friends [illegible]

[illegible]

Bristow [illegible] transactions have [illegible] the contest for the [illegible] standard bearers of the Republicans in the approaching campaign is rapidly improving. Indeed the contest for the nomination seems to be narrowing down to Blaine [illegible] of two things: either that the people [illegible] or that the Federal ring can not control the election.

[illegible] great conference in [illegible] Williams [illegible] for a national convention [illegible] for President as citizens [illegible] support. But [illegible] sentiment which prevails [illegible] among Republicans of the [illegible] The politicians can ill afford to ignore this sentiment while the two parties are so nearly equal in enough of the great States to leave no perfectly safe [illegible] when the general result is under consideration. The Democrats, should the national convention proceed with discretion, will have good reason to hope for a national triumph unless the Republicans give particular attention to the demand of the people for reform and measure the character of the candidates selected. The probabilities are that the next President will be either a Republican free from taint or suspicion of sympathy with [illegible] or a Democrat.

Electors in Polk county are in a state which does not afford the most unbounded confidence to the Democrats. Their ticket is very weak and many respectable members of the party are openly opposing it. At the head of the ticket as candidate for the State Senate is Ben Hayden, Esq., whose nomination it is claimed was secured by means well calculated to augment his great unpopularity. Some others on the ticket meet with determined opposition. Meanwhile the Independents have brought out a strong ticket and one that commands the respect and confidence of the community. Mr Bentley, who is placed in the lead for State Senator, is especially popular and will in all likelihood get away with the Polk [illegible] strings.

The House is determined to keep Kilbourn as long as it is in session unless he answers the questions propounded to him by the real estate pool investigating committee. The sergeant at arms of the House appeared before Judge Carter and declined to deliver Kilbourn up, and Judge Carter thereupon decided to take no further action in the matter. A member of the committee states that information in its possession undoubtedly confirms the statements heretofore made that ex-Congressmen Eldredge and Young and Judge MacArthur were members of the pool. The other member he says, is as likely to be the President or Babcock as it is Belknap, whose name has been mentioned as in it.

A letter from Heppner, in Umatilla county, says the Democratic primary which was held there lately was boisterous and disorderly in the extreme. Pistols were drawn and at one time a general row appeared imminent. At length, however, the differences were adjusted so far as to enable the brethren to dwell together in unity and the game of fixing up things for the county convention went on. After the meeting was over the brethren went on the street and had another promiscuous war of words and display of weapons.

The news from Europe seems to indicate the imminency of a great war. The Eastern question is in such a state that a rupture of amicable relations between Russia and Austria is likely to occur at any moment, in which case a stupendous conflict in which all the nations of Europe would probably be involved would ensue. It is stated that [illegible] is being purchased in England by continental nations, which would not be bought if the [illegible] nations did not anticipate being engaged before long in warfare.

The Emperor of Brazil does not like a crowd and very quietly dodged the [illegible] one which assembled at the dock in New York when he was expected to disembark [illegible] by landing at a different place. Secretaries Fish, Robeson and [illegible], however, together with a large company of other persons, in two steamers met him in the lower bay and escorted him to the city. He was saluted by the batteries on shore with 100 guns and by a Brazilian war ship with a royal salute.

The Independents of Washington county held their primaries last Saturday. The delegates from Hillsboro precinct to the county convention are Peter Boscow, J Freeman, J H Warren, James Smith, J Shute, Geo Morrow, [illegible] Patterson, J Stewart, H Wehrung, Alfred Lueling and J Butler. We are not advised of the names of delegates from other precincts.

Babcock has very nearly reached the lowest depths of degradation. The grand jury of the District of Columbia has indicted him on a charge of complicity in the Harrington safe burglary, which would hardly have been done if the evidence had not been pretty strong against him. It is not unlikely that he may step from the White House to a prison.

It is supposed there will be three tickets in the field in Douglas county. Only the Independents have yet nominated. They have put forth a strong ticket, and it is predicted that fact will compel the other parties to bring out good men.

THE N[illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] railways [illegible] war [illegible] railway companies [illegible]

[illegible] himself as [illegible] surrounded [illegible] political [illegible] soon became the [illegible] centre of [illegible] through [illegible] him. The railways were used to build up [illegible] and to oppress their enemies [illegible]. A town laid out in the interest of [illegible] member of his political ring must be built up at every hazard by the aid of the road and to accomplish that other towns [illegible] the line of the road [illegible] the people of the respective localities had been [illegible] with their institutions and conveniences from a time long prior to any talk of railways would [illegible] denied the simplest [illegible]. A passenger to get on board the train must travel along the line of the road two or three miles to the new town of the political favorite. A ton of freight must be hauled in the same way. By just such unjust and senseless [illegible] as this the people [illegible] two sections of the country were made enemies of the manager of the roads. An equally unjust and much more offensive discrimination was exercised among individual shippers. Notably this was so on the east side road. A member of Holladay's political ring could get private terms by which he would have an advantage of several cents on every bushel of grain over outsiders. This enabled him to defy competition and rule the market at prices which others could not afford and thus eventually to get a monopoly of the business for his particular locality. Competition being thus put down the price also was put down and thus a double wrong was wrought, a wrong to the shipper driven out of the market and a wrong to the farmer. The merchant sells his goods to any who will pay his price but Mr Holladay labored under the mistake that the same rule of business was essential to the management of railways, and charged different prices for the same service according as the person for whom it was performed was related to his ring in political matters. Complaints of this sort of discrimination were common.

But these were not the worst things to which the connection between the railways and politics gave rise. [illegible] employed on and about the roads a large number of persons. These were a solid phalanx [illegible] disposal [illegible] election [illegible] was deemed [illegible] calculated to [illegible] the end in view. Working men whose families depended on their daily earnings for bread could [illegible] and the loss [illegible] were used for the free importation of [illegible] and shoulder hitters and vagrants from one town into another wherever [illegible] forces the [illegible]. A primary meeting, a political convention, a local or general election was the occasion for the free transportation of all the henchmen and swashbucklers of the ring. In short by every method that could be [illegible] by Mr Holladay [illegible] the railways were made to minister to [illegible] politicians to their own great injury and the ultimate [illegible] of their owners.

There is a lesson in all this [illegible] management to ponder. [illegible] railways [illegible] Mr Holladay [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] that Morton [illegible] consider [illegible] Whatever [illegible] Washington [illegible]

[illegible] Bristow in dishonest transactions have ful[illegible] bearers of the Republicans in the approaching campaign is rapidly improving. Indeed the contest for the nomination seems to be narrowing down [illegible] and Conkling [illegible] tion or that the Federal ring can act on [illegible] the election.

[illegible] influence [illegible] William [illegible] for the radical [illegible] Republicans [illegible]

The [illegible] in Polk county are in a state which does not afford the most unlimited [illegible] to the Democrats. Their ticket is very weak and many respectable members of the party are openly opposing it. At the head of the ticket as candidate for the State Senate is Ben Hayden Esq, whose nomination it is claimed was secured by means well calculated to augment his great unpopularity. Some others on the ticket meet with determined opposition. Meanwhile the Independents have brought out a strong ticket and one that commands the respect and confidence of the community. Mr Bentley who is placed in the field for State senator is especially popular, and will in all likelihood get away with the [illegible] strings.

The House is determined to keep Kilbourn as long as it is in session unless he answers the question propounded to him by the real estate pool investigating committee. The sergeant at arms of the House appeared before Judge Carter and declined to deliver Kilbourn up and Judge Carter thereupon decided to take no further action in the matter. A member of the committee states that information in its possession undoubtedly confirms the statements heretofore made that ex Congressman Eldredge and Young and Judge MacArthur were members of the pool. The other member he says, is as likely to be the President or Babcock as it is Belknap whose name has been mentioned in it.

A letter from Heppner, in Umatilla county, says the Democratic primary which was held there lately was boisterous and disorderly in the extreme. Pistols were drawn and at one time a general row appeared imminent. At length however, the differences were adjusted so far as to enable the brethren to dwell together in unity and the game of fixing up things for the county convention went on. After the meeting was over the brethren went on the street and had another promiscuous war of words and display of weapons.

The news from Europe seems to indicate the imminency of a great war. The Eastern question is in such a state that a rupture of amicable relations between Russia and Austria is likely to occur at any moment [illegible] which case a stupendous conflict in which all the nations of Europe would probably be involved would ensue. It is stated that grain is being purchased in England by continental nations which would not be bought at the [illegible] long in warfare.

The Emperor of Brazil [illegible] New York [illegible] saluted by the batteries on shore with 100 guns and by a Brazilian war ship with a royal salute.

The Independents of Washington county held their primaries last Saturday. The delegates from [illegible] precinct to the county convention are [illegible] J [illegible] H Warren, Jimmy Smith, J Shute, Geo Morrow, L Patterson, J Stewart, H Welrin, Alfred Luelling and J Butler. We are not advised of the [illegible] of delegates from other precincts.

Babcock has [illegible] the lowest depths of degradation. The grand jury of the District of Columbia has indicted him on a charge of complicity in the Harrington safe burglary, which would hardly have been done if the evidence had not been pretty strong against him. It is not unlikely that he may step from the White House to a prison.

It is supposed that there will be three tickets in the field in Douglas county. Only the Independents have yet nominated. They have put forth a strong ticket and it is predicted that [illegible] compel the other parties to bring out [illegible]

DAY MORNING APRIL 17 1876

CITY.

TAYLOR FERRY TRAGEDY The search has been instituted for the [illegible] Joseph Bellanger whose cabin at Taylor's ferry was destroyed by fire last [illegible] morning, has led to the discovery [illegible] which confirm the generally enter[tained] impression that the man was murdered From what has been ascertained, together with the circumstances of the house, and the unaccountable [disappear]ance of the man there can scarcely [be] a doubt but that Bellanger has been [murdered] foully Persons who have recently come from Taylor's ferry state that the [tracks] of two or three men have been dis[covered] leading from the Frenchman's house, [and] following the tracks for some distance [the]y were found presenting the appearance [that] some heavy body having been dragged [al]ong the ground Some distance away [ne]ar the cabin a hat was picked up, which [was] identified as belonging to Bellanger [and] it had traces of blood Soon after the [trail] was found the trail changed into a num[ber] of horses' tracks. From where Bellanger's [cabin] stood to the Tualatin river is only about [a mile] and a half, and the supposition is that the Frenchman was murdered in his [cabin] which was burned to obliterate the [traces] of the blood, and that the body was [carried] some distance, then placed on horse[back and] conveyed to the river and thrown [into] the stream. All efforts thus far made [to] find the body have proved unsuccessful

EASTER SUNDAY AT ST. STEPHENS CHAPEL The Easter services yesterday afternoon at St [Stephens] chapel were very beautiful appro[priate] and impressive. The service was choral throughout, and was most admirably [rendered] and performed. It began with a proces[sional] hymn, set to music from Mozart's First [Mass] followed in proper order by the psalms [for] the day, chanted antiphonally the [Gloria] Domino, set to music by [Dr] [illegible] the Benedic Anima Mea, to [music] by Jacobs, an anthem by Handel and [music] by Jacobs, an anthem by E. Greatorex The [recessional] hymn by the teachers and pupils [was] rendered by the teachers and pupils [of] St Helen's Hall, with great feeling, taste and skill. The rite of confirmation was ad[ministered] by the Bishop to a class of three [and] afterwards he made an appropriate [address.] A very large congregation was as[sembled,] filling not only the chapel proper [but] also the room in the rear, the sliding doors [bet]ween the two rooms being drawn back so [as to] throw the two into one It being Easter [Sun]day the chapel was beautifully decorated [wi]th flowers and floral crowns, of which the [one ab]ove the altar and the one on the wall on [the] east side of the chapel are deserving of [special] mention for their exquisite elegance [and] beauty

MUSICAL NUISANCE.—Few who walk the [street] on a gala day, with swelling hearts and [dan]cing feet keeping time to some patriotic [or] thrilling popular air from the brass band on [the] grand parade, are aware of the immense [amount] of practice and infinite pains it has [cost] to prepare each one to produce the deli[cious] strains which catch the popular ear Everybody appreciates good music whether bending over the piano, turning the leaves for a fair damsel as she rattles off the latest waltz or sitting entranced in softly cushioned seats at the theater listening to the beautiful notes swelling up from the orchestra—even the grand old church organ has its charms But if it be true that "music hath charms to soothe the savage breast," few, very few, indeed be come the willing victims of some ambitious youth sawing on a violin, or voluntary burnt offerings at the shrine of an amateur perform er practicing on the cornet or trombone These remarks were suggested while sitting in a tonsorial chair down First street, for half an hour listening to the dismal sounds proceed ing from a brass instrument in the regions overhead "Let us have peace" is the motto of that barber, and if there be law to prevent "let no guilty man escape."

SHAFT BROKEN —While the steamer Dixie Thompson was on the way down the river en route for Astoria, Saturday morning and had reached a point a short distance below Wood[ward']s mill, she had the misfortune to break her shaft. Luckily the Welcome was only a short way behind when the accident occurred She came [to] the disabled steamer took off the [passengers] and freight, towed her back to the [illegible] and then proceeded on to As[toria.] [illegible] the Bonita will be placed [on] the route until the necessary repairs are [made] to the Dixie. For some months past the Bonita has been running on the route be tween [illegible] and the Cascades, but this morning the Onedia will take her place An order was telegraphed to San Francisco at once for a new shaft, which will leave on the next steamer. The fractured shaft has been used constantly on the Dixie for the last ten years.

REPORTED RICH DISCOVERIES —From the [mor]ning contemporary we learn that a gentle man by the name of Waters, a resident of [illegible] addition to East Portland returned last Friday from a trip to Mount Hood in the vicinity of which he has been spending sev eral weeks. He showed several specimens of gold bearing quartz, which he says he found near the above named mountain as well as a few grains of course gold probably worth a dollar, which he claims to have washed from the banks of a small stream, while prospect ing. He gives it as his opinion that valuable gold bearing quartz ledges exist at the base or near the base of the Mount, and also that the [pro]spects of placer diggings are such as to war rant his immediate return to what he believes to be a veritable Eldorado

A WORD TO VISITORS.—As an impression may prevail throughout the country that the hotel keepers of Portland will form a combi nation and make a material advance in the price of board and lodging during the four days of Centennial celebration, we feel war ranted in saying that such a course will not be pursued. All who attend the celebration from abroad can rest assured that they will be accommodated on reasonable terms, and that our hotel keepers as well as the committees will strive to make visitors comfortable and render their stay as agreeable as possible

He was told to go to a hotel and was heard to rap on the door adjoining soon after The jeweler heard no more of him

MONDAY MORNING APRIL 17 1876

MARTHA'S WAITING

She was Martha, Irish and red. She had been in America a year and had worked hard [illegible] had saved from her wages and sent money over the water to her old [illegible] mother in Ireland.

But she used to think at odd times, this Martha [illegible] nothing [illegible] remembrance of home would come [illegible] her and sometimes she would [illegible] or she would be sweeping a room and a thought [illegible] she [illegible] few minutes just unmindful of anything [illegible]. Ah, this thinking [illegible] and everybody too [illegible] we never know when to expect it.

Now she had no great time to herself but her heart was a great big world in which there was [illegible] few friends [illegible] when she [illegible] of the old place [illegible] she had a wonderful feeling for him [illegible] when she was standing ready to leave for the new country. "Martha [illegible] little [illegible] can take [illegible] remind you o' me."

"[illegible] much that I have," said she, "[illegible] and what's that?"

"Me heart, Pat, for sure [illegible] sure enough."

[illegible] laugh at her and told her to cheer up for in a little while he was coming [illegible] and be sure then everything would be all right.

Ah well, here she was working away for [illegible] waiting.

[illegible] kind to those [illegible] faithful and true.

"Martha, why don't you go out more?" asked her mistress.

"If it plase ye ma'am, I'd rather stay by mesilf and then I don't know many places to go."

So she stayed at home. Often of pleasant evenings when work was done and she had a breathing spell she used to sit down with her rough hands in her lap and think of Pat.

She wondered what he was doing then, if he was thinking of her, or maybe he was smoking his pipe at her mother's little cottage, and talking about her; may be he was joking with the children; oh, he could joke finely could Pat, as she well remembered. She hoped he was well and cheerful and bore up under the loss of her well, not too well; she would rather that he be a little lonely at times just for the sake of the love she bore him.

She could not write, you see, or may be she would have sent him a letter, but then there would have been small use in that too, seeing that he could not read.

She got to know the places where the emigrant ships came in and one day she saw many poor homeless Irish land without friends on this side and with little or no money, wandering about like lost till the cars should come which would take them to the Eldorado of the world—the west.

Martha bought cakes and candies and went to them and gave the stuff to the poor forlorn children. Her broad, honest face did good to the sick hearted women and they looked up with a little glad look in their eyes at the sight of one of their own countrywomen.

"Are any of ye from Donegal?" asked she of one of the women.

"Bless ye, darlint, that I am," responded the woman.

"And do yez know the widdy McCoy?"

"Troth and I do and all the family."

"I'm Martha McCoy."

"What, ye're Martha as yer own mother talks so much about? May the blessed Virgin hould ye but yer mother loves ye."

"Yes I know," said Martha, a tear in her eye, "and do ye know Pat Cardegan?"

"Aye and I do. He's a well doin boy wid broad shoulders, and he's comin over here next year."

"God bless ye for that same news," said Martha as she helped the woman to the cars.

She stood watching the train as it went away, loth to leave any one who had seen him and all that was dear to her later than she had.

One day, working in the kitchen, Martha heard a hand organ in front of the house playing 'Donnybrook Fair.' She stopped, listened, ran to the street, gave money to the man. "Will yez play that over again?" asked she, "for Pat used to sing it, you see."

She fell to thinking, to be sure if he came he would have no home to go to, she must try to save money to give him, so that he might not feel poor until he got something to do, but then he too would go West. Well, in that case she would go also; she was strong and hearty, she could get work anywhere and then, with Pat, she wouldn't care how hard she had it.

Now, she had sent money home by the priest of her church and he said to her when next she saw him: "Martha McCoy, Father Cambell, over in Donegal, sends me word to you that Pat Cardigan is to sail for America next week. Your mother and all well and send their duty to you."

What! Pat coming? She could hardly thank the father for his welcome words. She flew home and worked fast and furious so that the other girls should not see that there was anything the matter with her.

"Martha, how your eyes shine," said one of them, "ain't you well?"

"Well!" she cried, "I'm more than happy"—and laughed.

She went to her mistress. "Ye've been very kind to me, ma'am," she said, "but I may leave you in a week."

"Why, Martha, where are you going?"

"There's some one coming from the ould country, ma'am, as may wish me to go West wid him."

"Oh, your sweetheart, eh, Martha?"

She smiled. "My young man, yes, ma'am."

"Well, Martha, I shall be very sorry to part with you, for you are a good girl and you will make a good wife."

"Thank ye ma'am indeed," she said, glad of this praise which seemed to say that Pat would be glad, too.

She counted her little savings and went out and engaged two rooms in a poor neighborhood, fell on her knees and prayed, while the tears streamed from her eyes—prayed for Pat—only him—and thanked God for sending him to her.

The time dragged on, her week was out and she left her mistress to go and wait for her lover.

In the poor little rooms she fixed and brightened up everything; she bought oatmeal so that she could make cakes like those in Ireland and so please Pat; she hunted the shipping office for news of the vessel. The men treated her kindly there, for she seemed so modest and was withal so wholesome and happy looking.

At last they told her the vessel would arrive in port next day. All night she sat in her home, waiting and glad. In the early morning she went down at the wharf along with many others who were waiting like her—some out of curiosity to see an emigrant ship, others to meet those they loved. She spoke to all about her. A little woman was waiting for her husband. Martha stayed by her till all at once a cry went up that the ship was coming in.

Big and black like a cloud it came slowly over the water, casting shadows on the stream, and at last was here.

Martha held the little woman up, for a man was looking above all the rest to the shore, and the little woman suddenly threw her arms around Martha's neck. "That's Ted," she cried, "that's me own darlint," and the emigrants were coming forth bewildered and anxious.

Martha could not stir from the place she occupied. A something like a sob of joy held [illegible] heart and she could not get free [illegible] people [illegible] she did not mind [illegible] did not hear them.

All at once a man in the crowd was seen by Martha [illegible].

[illegible] and [illegible] a woman was with him.

Martha [illegible] such a strange [illegible] Martha mechanically [illegible].

"Who is that?" she asked.

"Why, Martha, this is Biddy, my wife. We were married just before we sailed. What's the matter now [illegible]." [illegible] her arms fell at her sides and her eyes [illegible] something clutched her throat and she could not breathe.

"Take me where there's air," she gasped, and he helped her away.

"Why, what ails ye, Martha?" asked Pat, while his wife looked astonished.

"Nothing, Pat, I'm well again. Ye have no place to go to, have ye?"

No, he had not.

"Then I've two rooms for ye here, which I took for ye when I heard ye was coming. Ye may have them and the rent's paid for a month. [illegible] far from here, far from here."

[illegible] repeated.

"Oh, Martha [illegible]."

[illegible] whisperingly, and the next day the work went on as usual and her strong arms were as powerful as ever, but the sorrow that lay down deep in her heart was only known between herself and God.

FINANCE AND COMMERCE.

Financial.

SATURDAY EVENING, April 15, 1876.

Gold in New York 11[illegible]

Legal Tenders in Portland—buying [illegible] selling [illegible]

Coin Exchange on San Francisco [illegible] per cent.

Coin Exchange on New York ¾ per cent. premium.

Telegraphic transfers on New York 1 per cent. premium.

The trade dollar, though becoming very plentiful here, is not a subject of as much perplexity as in the San Francisco market. When the trade dollar is quoted at 10 per cent discount there halves are quoted at 8 per cent, while there is a difference of about 10 per cent in intrinsic value in favor of trades. This, says the Chronicle, is because there has been a redundant coinage of them by private parties for speculative purposes, and the large amounts coined at the Mint is proof the speculation a paying one. The telegraph states that an amendment to the so called Silver Currency bill of the House of Representatives provides that a new silver dollar shall be coined—to be of standard weight, and standard silver, and in general appearance corresponding to the old silver dollar. This dollar to be legal tender in sums not exceeding $50, and exchangeable at its nominal value for silver bullion at its market value, to be ascertained and announced from time to time by the Director of the Mint. And trade dollars shall not hereafter be legal tender. The clause of the recommendations relating to trade dollars, that they shall not hereafter be made legal tender, is a wise suggestion and one that if carried out will greatly better the situation. Trade dollars were originally intended for the uses of foreign trade, to take the place of the Mexican dollar in the transactions with China, and so long as they were confined to that purpose alone the license to have them coined on private account was never abused. The clause which was added to the coinage act wherein they were made legal tender to the amount of $5 seems to have worked the present evil results. If this suggestion was carried out subsidiary silver coin would doubtless appreciate at least 5 per cent.

Ship Building.

It is considered only a question of time when this Northwest coast will become noted for being a leading ship building district of the world. The present year will witness some important events in this regard, but advices from abroad do not indicate that it will be a good year for the business anywhere. Agents in the New York branch of Bureau Veritas says there is a singular state of affairs existing in Eastern ship yards, not only in Maine but in the British provinces. One remarkable fact is that vessels can be built in Maine at a cost far below anything known before for many years, builders there having a decided advantage in this respect compared with competitors beyond the boundary line. Ships with good oak frames can be built now at $50 to $55 per ton custom house measurement ready for sea—a rate almost unheard of, at least within the last thirty years. These figures are two or three dollars a ton less than has been charged for soft wood ships in the provinces, allowing for the difference between gold and currency.

The tonnage of American shipping is about 700,000 tons less now than in 1860. We are paying to foreign ship owners $80,000,000 for the carrying service. Americans can build the best and the swiftest wooden ships in the world, and with a fair chance can build them as cheaply as they can be built elsewhere. It is not creditable to our intelligence, enterprise or self respect that our commerce should be so largely in the hands of foreigners. In addition to the facts in regard to shipbuilding given above, the following statements are made: The demand for new vessels is very limited. The best ship carpenters in Maine are now glad to work at from $1 to $1.75 per day. [illegible]. This being the season when shipbuilders start the year's business with the expectation of launching their finished work in the fall, the prospects for 1876 are just now regarded with interest. Boston and Newburyport are now likely to equal last year. At Kennebunk they are building three or four ships, and at Bath eight or ten, all large vessels, 1,000 tons and upward. Further east, at Waldoboro, Damariscotta and Thomaston, there are probably eight more, and on the Penobscot six or eight are building—that is, are in progress or the frames are getting ready. The opinions entertained by Eastern ship builders may be gathered from recent letters. One of them, writing from Bath, says: "I think $50 or $51 per ton will pay the bills on a good ship at present prices, but there would be no profit for the builder." In support of this view it is known that the ship Palmyra, a fine vessel of 1,1[illegible]6 tons, was recently finished at $50 per ton ready for sea, and at Kennebunk new tonnage has been offered as low as $48 per ton all complete.

Domestic Produce.

Aside from an active retail trade and sales from wagons, Saturday is usually the dullest day of the week in the produce market, and the heavy rains of the past few days so discourages hauling that scarcely anything has been done to-day. Wheat and flour are steady at quotations, but rather because of a scarcity of sellers than of any lively demand. Prices, however, are more likely to recede than to advance unless advices from abroad should turn to be of different character very soon. The backwardness of the season keeps up the prices for mill feed, while oats are upheld by the call for seed and an actual or supposed short supply. The market for bacon and lard is good and prices as at our last report are very firm with an advancing tendency. Dairy products even thus far along in the spring command [illegible] prices. Eggs and poultry are both weak, [illegible] of the week [illegible] potatoes are sustained by the jobbing trade. The demand in the manufacturing districts on this coast [illegible] mining and shippers are freely saving them [illegible].
